

1953. They vary in stipend from $1,500 to $3,000 and are for the most-part unrestricted as to field of study. One of them is specifically for study outside the United States; one is preferably awarded in the field of history to a graduate of any college belonging to the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools. Fellowships are open to those who have completed two years work toward the doctorate, and to more advanced students.

Applications and supporting materials must reach the office of the Association in Washington by December 15, 1951. For detailed information concerning these fellowships and instructions for applying, address the Secretary, Committee on Fellowship Awards, A. A. U. W., 1634 Eye Street, N. W., Washington, D. C.

Arthur Henry Clark, well-known publisher and bookseller, recently particularly known for his activities in connection with western Americana, died at Glendale, California, on May 15, 1951.

Professor Howard W. Cline, Northwestern University, spent the summer months in Mexico making an anthropological and historical study of the Chinantla area, one which has assumed importance of late because of its relation to the great new hydroelectric development at Papaloapan. His work is supported by the Social Science Research Council.

Mr. G. R. G. Conway, a former executive of the Mexico City Power Company, a British subject many years resident in Mexico, died in that city on May 20, 1951. Mr. Conway devoted himself to collecting and studying early Mexicana and published works in the field, including facsimile editions of some Cortés documents. He also particularly interested himself in research concerning the Englishmen who were put ashore in Mexico on Hawkins' third voyage to America. His private library in Cuernavaca was hospitably put at the disposition of many visiting scholars to whom he was uniformly generous. His death will be regretted by many historians who have worked in Mexico and have experienced his helpful interest in their work.

Dr. Lewis Hanke, for many years director of the Hispanic Foundation in the Library of Congress, and who made that institution a leading factor in the development of Hispanic Studies in the United States and in relations among scholars in the field, both in the Americas and in Europe, has resigned his position and has accepted a "Distinguished Professorship" in history at the University of Texas where he will be in charge of the Hispanic activities of that university.

Clifton B. Kroeber, who was granted the doctorate in history during the present year by the University of California, Berkeley, has accepted an appointment as assistant professor of history at the University of Wisconsin. Professor Kroeber's research has been in the history of transportation and communications in the Río de la Plata area.

Professor Irving Leonard of the University of Michigan has resigned his position as head of the department of romance languages in that institution and has become a member of the department of history, in which he will teach both general courses and a seminar in his field of special interest, the intellectual and literary history of the colonial era in Hispanic America.

Rayford W. Logan, one of the members of the editorial board of this REVIEW, has received a Fulbright grant for the study of French colonial administration. He will spend the academic year 1951-1952 in France.

Dr. Lyle N. McAlister, who recently secured the Ph.D. in history at the University of California, Berkeley, is an instructor of Latin-American History in University College of the University of Florida, Gainesville. He is a specialist in the history of Mexico in the later eighteenth century.

Dr. Richard B. MacCornack, Department of State, has temporarily taken over the work in Latin-American history at George Washington University previously handled by Professor A. Curtis Wilgus. The latter has taken over the directorship of the Inter-American Institute at the University of Florida, Gainesville, Florida.

Professor Watt Stewart, New York State College for Teachers, Albany, taught during the summer at Chico State College in California.

Professor Walter V. Scholes of the University of Missouri spent a part of the summer in Mexico where he carried on research in the history of Mexican mining in the early nineteenth century. This work was financed by a grant from the American Philosophical Society.

Prof. Arthur P. Whitaker of the University of Pennsylvania spent the summer in Germany where he lectured and conducted a seminar at the University of Heidelberg. He also lectured in a number of other German cities.

José Zamudio, head of the Cataloguing and Bibliography Section of the Biblioteca del Congreso, Santiago, Chile, has come to this country to serve as editorial assistant in the office of RIB (Revista Interamericana de Bibliografía) in the Pan American Union, Washington. He is an historian, as well as a bibliographer, with several works to his credit in nineteenth-century Chilean history. His special interest at present is the study of Isidoro Errázuriz.
