

Contributors

THOMAS DIPIERO is the author of Dangerous Truths and Criminal Passions: the Evolution of the French Novel, 1569-1791 and of White Men Aren't. He is currently working on a book on ambivalence.

SCOTT BLACK teaches English at the University of Utah. His book, Of Essays and Reading in Early Modern Britain, has been published this year by Palgrave.

PAUL KELLEHER is Assistant Professor of English Literature at Oberlin College. He is currently completing a book manuscript on British sentimentalism and the literary history of sexuality.

RUTH MACK is Assistant Professor of English at the State University of New York at Buffalo. She is currently completing a book manuscript entitled Literary Historicity: Structuring Historical Consciousness in Eighteenth-Century Britain.

ANNE FREY is Assistant Professor of English at TCU. She is currently at work on a book project, entitled Organizational Romanticism: Bureaucratic Nationalism and Authorship.

MARY HONG is a Ph.D. candidate in English at The Johns Hopkins University. Her dissertation examines the representation of the detail in Jane Austen, George Eliot, and Arthur Conan Doyle's Sherlock Holmes stories.

EUGENIA ZUROSKI is Assistant Professor of English at the University of Arkansas. Her current work is on chinoiserie and the pre-history of orientalism in British literature of the long eighteenth century.

JASON D. SOLINGER is Assistant Professor of English at The Citadel. He is currently at work on a book entitled Becoming the Gentleman: British Letters and the Gentrification of Ordinary Men.

LORRI NANDREA is Assistant Professor of English at the University of Wisconsin—Stevens Point. TOBIAS MENELY is Assistant Professor of English at Willamette University. He has published articles in Eighteenth-Century Life and Mosaic, and he is currently working on a study of animal advocacy and sentimentality in eighteenth-century Britain. LISA O'CONNELL is a post-doctoral fellow at The Johns Hopkins University and a co-editor of the collection, Libertine Enlightenment: Sex, Liberty and License in the Eighteenth Century (2004). JOSEPH LITVAK is Professor of English at Tufts University. He has recently published essays on Dickens, Trollope, Shelley Winters, and Adorno, and he is currently completing a book entitled Sycocanalysis: Jewishness, Blacklisting, and the Comic. PAM MORRIS is an Honorary Research Fellow in the Department of English at Aberdeen University. Her recent publications include Realism (2003) and Imagining Inclusive Society in Nineteenth-Century Novels: The Code of Sincerity in the Public Sphere (2004).