

torial policies regarding length, style manual used, and special requirements. It is a useful compilation, but not a substitute for examination of the journal in question. Since authors may often secure publication in translation in a Latin American journal, the language limitation is unfortunate, especially from the point of view of the novice author. In addition, there have been some omissions, for instance, of The South Atlantic Quarterly. Finally, journals that did not respond to the questionnaire are simply listed and the compilers might usefully have consulted these few themselves for inclusion in the indices.

Santiago: Revista de la Universidad de Oriente. Vol. 1, No. 1. Managing Editor: NILS CASTRO. Santiago de Cuba, 1970. Universidad de Oriente. Pp. 185. Quarterly.

This serial publication is a new journal similar to one which appeared at the same university in the early sixties—but with a different format and title. The periodical covers both past and present events and provides an interesting view of contemporary Cuban thought and interests. General sections cover areas related to prominent Cuban and world leaders, modern poetry and fiction, interviews, and discussions on art and music, assessments of current hemispheric events, and selections from and reviews of new book. The selections consist of works by both Cuban and non-Cuban educators and writers, reprinted articles and a few contributions by students of the Universidad de Oriente. This journal is a welcome addition to the body of literature available from Cuba.

Revista del Centro de Estudios Educativos. Vol. 1, No. 1. Managing Editor, GUILLERMO DE LA PEÑA. Mexico City, 1971. Centro de Estudios Educativos. Pp. 192. Quarterly.

As stated on the title page, this periodical, which is issued quarterly, contains "scientific articles on educational problems in Latin America, as well as notes and reports on institutions, events, and publications of interest in the field of Mexican and international education."

If this first issue of 1971 is indicative, the periodical clearly fulfills its objective. Articles on the productivity of education in Mexico, a critical review of the educational accomplishments of the Díaz Ordaz administration, educational reform in Peru, and statistical data on literacy and primary instruction in Mexico in 1969 demonstrate the wide scope of coverage.

A critical journal on education which provides a balance to the often propagandistic reports of ministries of education is sorely needed. Hopefully this periodical will secure the wide readership it deserves.
