Editorial Note

This issue of The Geophysical Journal is devoted to papers associated with the International Seismological Summary.

The Geophysical Journal and its predecessor, The Geophysical Supplement to the Monthly Notices of the Royal Astronomical Society, have always been closely associated with the I.S.S., and when the I.S.S. was wound up the Council of the Royal Astronomical Society decided that this association should be marked by a special number of The Geophysical Journal.

The special contributions to this issue represent of course only a sample of the type of use to which the I.S.S. work has been put in the past, and together with the history of the I.S.S. by Dr Stoneley and a note by Dr Sadler, President of the Council of F.A.G.S., forms a fitting tribute to the fine achievements of the I.S.S.
