Notes to Contributors

Two copies of each manuscript should be sent directly to the editor of the journal. They should conform to the following guidelines:

Form
1. A one-paragraph abstract, text and endnotes, and a list of figures must be typed, double-spaced, on one side of standard size (8 1/2 x 11 inches or A4) paper. Set the computer program to print a maximum of twenty-five lines per page in twelve-point type (ten to twelve words per line). Pages are to be numbered consecutively throughout, with endnotes, captions, abstract, and photo credits on separate pages following the text.
2. Provide the author’s name and institutional affiliation or city of residence on the first copy of the manuscript. Omit this information on the second copy. Please include photocopies of illustrations with the first submission. Do not send original artwork. The photocopies should be numbered consecutively on the face.
3. Manuscripts must be clearly printed with a letter-quality printer and should follow the conventional wording of words to be printed in italics. Do not use italic or boldface. Notes must be supplied as double-spaced endnotes on separate pages.

Abstract
In no more than 150 words, the abstract should summarize the argument and define the methodological approach of the article.

Endnotes
1. Endnotes should follow The Chicago Manual of Style (15th edition) and the practices of this journal. They should be numbered and should follow current JSAH layout as closely as possible.
2. Abbreviate the title of this journal as JSAH. Any other such abbreviations in the notes should be spelled out on first mention.

Illustrations
It is essential that authors procure high-quality black-and-white illustrations. Photographs should be supplied as glossy prints, preferably 8 x 10 inches and no smaller than 5 x 7 inches. We also accept illustrations in electronic form if the following specifications are met: illustrations should be scanned in black and white at 300 dpi; the image size should be approximately 5 x 8 inches; JPEGs are preferred but TIFFs are acceptable; the scan should be labeled with the same figure number that is found in the text and the caption list; two print-outs of the images must be included. Send the files on CD or 100 MB zip disks. Do not email illustrations. Bear in mind that no printing process, no matter how sophisticated, can improve the quality of your photograph.
1. Each illustration should be marked indicating the top of the illustration, the author’s last name, and the figure number.
2. Authors must obtain permission to reproduce illustrations when necessary and pay copyright fees and other costs. Include a copy of the written permission with the manuscript. Illustrations will be returned to authors.
3. The list of illustrations provides the figure captions. The order of information is: designer, name of the building or object, location, date, description, source. If a building has been destroyed, include that information. Subsequent references may be shorter than the first one. The caption may also be used to direct the reader to a salient part of the image. Such references can unburden the text of minor details and help orient readers. Illustrations should be numbered consecutively in order of mention in the text.
4. Illustration credits should be listed separately following the endnotes. If relevant to the text, sources such as periodical publications may be included in captions.

Editorial Miscellany
1. Spelling: use current American spelling and typographical practice.
2. Names and titles: after the first mention, the last name of a person living or dead will suffice unless clarity requires a title or additional name.
4. Dimensions: use figures rather than spelled-out numbers and spell out units of measurement: “100 feet,” “43 centimeters,” “26 Roman palmi.” English and metric units may be abbreviated in discussions of quantitative data in technical articles: 100 ft., 43 cm (no periods with metric abbreviations).
5. Quotations from foreign languages must be translated in the text, with the original in the endnote only if necessary. Isolated foreign words will be italicized in the printed text and should be shown by underscoring in the version submitted to the editor. Full foreign-language quotations are set in roman type and put within quotation marks. Foreign personal titles, names of buildings or rooms (Sala della Pace, Residenz), institutions (École des Beaux-Arts, Bibliotheca Hertziana), and the like are not italicized.
6. All other editorial issues may be resolved by consulting The Chicago Manual of Style or the editor.

Book Reviews
1. Book reviews are solicited directly by the review editors, who ask that a review be delivered within three months of the agreement to write it. A reviewer should include a description of the book’s contents along with the reviewer's critical assessment. Authors are free to evaluate books as they choose, but the editors retain normal editorial responsibilities, including the right of rejection. The length of a review will be determined by the book review editors but generally is not to exceed 1,500 words.

2. Reviews must be headed: author, title, place of publication, publisher, date, number of pages and of color and black-and-white illustrations, price, and ISBN. Headings, like text, should be double-spaced.

3. Texts of reviews should conform to the requirements for articles.

Letters to the Editor
A letter that comments on an article or review should be sent to the editor, who may forward the letter to the author for reply; two copies of the letter, typed, double-spaced, and signed, should be submitted. Letters will not necessarily be published; if published, they will be subject to editing.

Author's Alterations to Galleys
Authors may not normally make changes in their texts after the type has been set. The cost of such alterations is billed to the author. Printer's errors will be corrected without charge.

Computer Disks
The JSAH requires final submission on computer disk (not CD). Copies of the disk are requested only after the article has been accepted. Text files are preferred in Word format for PC.

Queries
If you have any questions about the format an article should take for submission or you wish guidance as to whether a subject might be appropriate for the JSAH, please write directly to the editor.

Master in History of Architecture DSA

Venezia-Roma 1500-1770

The course is devoted to the study of the architecture of Venice and Rome between 1500 and 1770.

The course will begin in April 2004. After an historical and critical introduction to the subject, there will be three lecture modules. The first will take place in Venice in May 2004 in the rooms of Palazzo Badoer, where the History of Architecture Department is located; the second in Rome, in September 2004 in the rooms of the Biblioteca Hertziana and of the Istituto Austriaco di Cultura; the third, in October 2004 will involve visiting Rome, Florence, Venice and Vicenza. The first two modules allow the student to study Venetian and Roman architecture in situ, visiting buildings which are not often open to the public. The third focuses on architectural design and will take place in some of the most important Italian drawing collections. June and July 2004 will be devoted to seminars in Venice. August 2004 will be devoted to a field tour in Italy.

The students must write their own thesis which will be examined at the end of the course in December 2004.

The Master's degree is part of the programme of internationalisation of the Italian university system. The course is aimed at postgraduates in architecture, engineering, literature, history, archaeology, history of art, conservation.

The presentation of the entire program of the Master Class is scheduled for February 1st, 2004.

Only 30 students will be accepted. The tuition fee is 2,500 euros. Eight scholarships of 2,500 euros will be granted.

The Secretary of the Master will be available for any needs of the students regarding their stay in Venice and Rome.

ARCHITECTURE FOR THE SHROUD
Relic and Ritual in Turin
John Beldon Scott
"Architecture for the Shroud provides an original and wholly convincing interpretation of the Chapel of the Most Holy Shroud in Turin, one of the key monuments of Baroque architecture and the acknowledged masterpiece of Guarino Guarini. Written with remarkable clarity and grace, the book transcends earlier works by placing Guarini's chapel against the broad background of liturgical and dynastic ritual, as well as the remarkable history of the relic it enshrines."—John Pinto, Princeton University

BUILDING THE SOUTH SIDE
Urban Space and Civic Culture in Chicago, 1890–1919
Robin F. Bachin
"Building the South Side carries the reader away, through one vivid moving picture of Chicago after another, until the great industrial city comes into wider and deeper focus than ever before. Robin Bachin has made a unique contribution to the distinguished literature on America's Second City, from the Chicago school of sociology up through the works of William Cronon. This is a book that leaves me satisfied as an historian, inspired as a citizen, and amazed by the accomplishment of its author."—Mary Ryan, The Johns Hopkins University
