

how the river has been cleaned up and now supports salmon and other important fish species.

An excellent discussion of the fishery biologists, fish hatcheries, and electrical generation facilities conveys the idea that science is important in ameliorating society's dilemmas of growth and energy, but that survival and quality of life ultimately depend on natural systems. Discussion questions also follow Part 2.

The teachers' guide is well thought out and includes background information that is useful in answering students' questions. Included with the teachers' guide is a worksheet that can be used as a test and a filmstrip entitled "Careers in Science: Biology."

I highly recommend this program to anyone teaching high school or junior college science or science and society classes. It is well suited to discussions of appropriate technology, ecosystem function, career education, and other topics.

The coverage and style that make biology accessible to your students

Human applications make biology interesting and understandable to your students. The text is designed to make students aware of their roles as humans in a complex biological system.

Flag system ties related material together throughout the text, integrating the various aspects of a subject with cross-referencing.

The Next Decade sections at the end of each chapter project biological trends and ideas into the future.

Boxed material in each chapter provides detailed information on specific topics and items of general interest.

Highly Illustrated!

NOTICES

To keep our members better informed of the opportunities available to them, NABT is now accepting advertising in News & Views, the bi-monthly newsletter. The new department, NOTICES, will carry announcements of membership services, study tours, group travel, summer institutes, career development courses, Positions Open and Wanted—plus, a unique Trade and Barter section. Do you have something you wish to trade? Is there something another teacher in a different part of the country might have in plentiful supply that you need? Take advantage of this opportunity. See the February News & Views for complete details.
