troversial. Umscheid et al. reported successful endovascular obliteration of fistula without type II endoleak [5].

In conclusion, stent-graft placement for aorto-caval fistula is an effective option to avoid catastrophic bleeding and hemodynamic deterioration during an operation.

References

doi:10.1510/icvts.2006.143074

Erratum

Erratum to ‘Procalcitonin and brain natriuretic peptide as parameters in the postoperative course of patients with major pulmonary resection’

Beatrix Hoksch, René Fahrner*, Ralph Alexander Schmid
Division of Thoracic Surgery, University Hospital Berne, Inselspital Berne, 3010 Berne, Switzerland

The publisher regrets that the name of the second author given in the above article, on p.155, was incorrect. It should read René Fahrner.

Our sincere apologies to the author for this mistake.

☆ doi of original article: 10.1510/icvts.2006.143073
*Corresponding author. Tel.: +41-31-6322330; fax: +41-31-6322327.
E-mail address: r.fahrner@web.de (R. Fahrner).
© 2007 Published by European Association for Cardio-Thoracic Surgery