The Journal of Occupational Therapy welcomes manuscripts that pertain to occupational therapy. Feature-length manuscripts (12–18 pages) may include (a) reports of research, educational activities, or professional trends; (b) descriptions of new occupational therapy approaches, programs, or services; (c) review papers that survey new information; or (d) theoretical papers that discuss or treat theoretical issues critically. Short manuscripts (3–6 pages) may be (a) descriptions of original therapeutic aids, devices, or techniques; (b) case reports that describe occupational therapy for a specific clinical situation; or (c) opinion essays that discuss timely issues or opinions and are supported by cogent arguments. In addition, the journal publishes letters to the editor, book reviews, and software and technology reviews. All copy is subject to editing. Important considerations are interest to the profession, originality, timeliness, validity, readability, and conciseness.

Submission
Manuscripts must be submitted with the author’s explicit assurance that they are not simultaneously under consideration by any other publication. To permit anonymous peer review, send three copies (including three copies of tables, photos, drawings, etc.) to the Editor, Elaine Viseltear, 616 Tanner Marsh Road, Guilford, Connecticut 06437. In your letter of transmittal, designate the senior author or another person as correspondent. The journal cannot assume responsibility for the loss of manuscripts.

Preparation
The entire manuscript, including the abstract, quotations, tables, and references, must be typed double-spaced on 8½ x 11 inch white paper, with 1-inch margins.

Title Page. Titles should be short and specific and should summarize the main idea of the paper. List three key words or phrases (not mentioned in the title) that highlight important aspects of the material presented in the article. Provide authors’ names, degrees, job titles, and current affiliations at the bottom of the page or on a separate sheet. (Include previous work affiliation if the article was written during the time of that affiliation.) Please include city, state, and zip code for workplace, as well as a telephone number for the corresponding author.

Abstract. Every feature-length manuscript must have an abstract (maximum of 150 words). The abstract should be factual, succinct, and sufficiently complete to enable the reader to grasp the essence of the paper quickly. An informative type of abstract includes a statement of the problem, method of study, results, and conclusions reached. A descriptive type of abstract indicates the subjects covered, central thesis, sources used, and conclusions.

Text. The introduction should include a statement of purpose (why the manuscript topic is being presented to occupational therapy readers at this time) or an indication of the topic’s importance or relevance to the field. The literature reviewed should be limited to those citations of primary relevance to the topic and should emphasize the more recent publications.

Acknowledgments. Acknowledgments must be brief. They should be typed double-spaced and appear after the text but before the reference page. Acknowledgments to people precede those for grant support. If the article is based on a thesis or on a presentation at a meeting, state this fact following the acknowledgments of people and grants.

References. References must also be typed double-spaced. Follow the style shown in the third edition of the Publication Manual of the American Psychological Association (1983), listing references in alphabetical order at the end of the article and providing authors’ names and year of publication for in-text citations.

Personal communications or other nonretrievable citations are described in the text. Provide name and date if the information was obtained from a person, provide name, date, and address if the information was obtained from an organization. Articles accepted for publication but not yet published can be included as references if you provide the name of the journal or book publisher.

Authors are solely responsible for the accuracy and completeness of the references. You should review and check them thoroughly. See the examples below for commonly used reference listings.

Tables: Tables should be self-explanatory and can be used if they supplement, rather than duplicate, the text. Type tables double-spaced, one on a page. Provide titles for each, and cite them in numerical order in the text.

Figures: Figures can be line drawings, graphs, charts, or photographs. Omit figures that repeat information given in the text or that do not enhance the understanding of the article.

Line drawings, graphs, and charts should be done professionally. Submit photographs as glossy black-and-white prints. Tape photographs onto a white piece of paper and write only on the paper. Do not use paper clips on photographic material. Symbols, abbreviations, and spellings should be consistent with those given in the text. Each figure must be labeled: Specify the figure number and the name of the senior author and indicate the figure's orientation (top) with an arrow.

Figures are cited in numerical order in the text. They must have captions, which should be typed double-spaced on a separate sheet of paper and numbered in consecutive order.

A letter of permission to publish (in duplicate) from the subjects must accompany the photographs of all identifiable subjects.

Abbreviations. The use of abbreviations is discouraged. If they are used, they are spelled out on their first appearance.

Patents
AOTA's copyright of the American Journal of Occupational Therapy only protects articles or works of authors published in the journal from unauthorized copying. It does not protect any items or products mentioned in such articles or works of authors.

Any device, piece of equipment, splint, or other item described with explicit directions for construction in an article submitted to the American Journal of Occupational Therapy for publication is not protected by AOTA copyright and can be produced for commercial purposes and patented by others, unless the item was patented, or its patent is pending, at the time the article is submitted.

Copyright
Authors are required to convey copyright ownership of their manuscripts to AOTA. Manuscripts published in the journal are copyrighted by AOTA and may not be published elsewhere without permission. Permission to reprint journal material for commercial or other purposes must be secured in writing from AOTA's Publications Division.

Manuscript Review
All accepted manuscripts are subject to copyediting. Authors will receive a photocopy of the edited manuscript for review and final approval, as well as reprint order forms. The manuscript must be returned to AOTA by first-class mail within 72 hours. The author(s) assumes final responsibility for the content of the manuscript, including the copyediting.

Style Manual
We have adopted the Publication Manual of the American Psychological Association (3rd edition, 1983) as our style guide. Consult the manual for all style questions.

If you have questions about the paper you contemplate submitting, refer to similar papers published in the journal. Alternatively, contact the Editor for writing guidelines regarding the following: Brief or New articles, Case Reports, Program Descriptions, Scientific Papers, Review Papers, and Procedures on Special Issues.
