

Appendix A: List of Tables and Figures

Tables

Table 1: Percent of participants from various U.S. geographic areas	14
Table 2: Number and percent of participants within each age category sampled	14
Table 3: Importance of various credibility cues	52

Figures

Figure 1: Weekly usage of the Internet by age	17
Figure 2: Percentage of parents restricting their child's Internet access by age of child	18
Figure 3: Children's use of Web-based information resources	20
Figure 4: Frequency of file sharing by age	21
Figure 5: Frequency of posting original content by age	21
Figure 6: Frequency of using social networking sites by age	22

Figure 7: Frequency of visiting virtual worlds by age	22
Figure 8: Frequency of social networking use by age	25
Figure 9: Frequency of “virtual” Web use by age	25
Figure 10: Frequency of commercial Web use by age	26
Figure 11: Frequency of online information contribution by age	27
Figure 12: Amount of online information that children find credible	32
Figure 13: Frequency of thinking about credibility when online	33
Figure 14: How concerned others should be about credibility	33
Figure 15: General social trust	34
Figure 16: General Internet social trust	35
Figure 17: Degree that children trust strangers they meet online	36
Figure 18: Degree that children trust strangers they meet online by age	36
Figure 19: Frequency that parents talk with their children about online credibility	38
Figure 20: Credibility of online information by information type	40
Figure 21: Credibility of blogs compared to newspapers and television	42
Figure 22: Credibility of Wikipedia	44

Figure 23: Most credible source by information type	46
Figure 24: Degree to which others should find information credible by medium	48
Figure 25: Use of credibility evaluation methods by age	49
Figure 26: Child/parent differences in discerning good versus bad information online	75
Figure 27: Child/parent differences in discerning false information online	76
Figure 28: Child/parent differences in the likelihood of questioning information online	77
Figure 29: Child/parent differences in discerning good versus bad information online, compared to a typical Internet user	79
Figure 30: Child/parent differences in the likelihood of believing false information online, compared to a typical Internet user	80
Figure 31: Child/parent differences in the likelihood of questioning information online, compared to a typical Internet user	81
Figure 32: Example encyclopedia entry	86
Figure 33: Credibility of one-sided versus balanced encyclopedia entries	87
Figure 34: Credibility of encyclopedia entry by perceived source	87
Figure 35: Example encyclopedia entry	89

Figure 36: Credibility of encyclopedia entry by placement of entry	90
Figure 37: Credibility of encyclopedia entry by actual encyclopedia source	91
Figure 38: Example product Web page	94
Figure 39: Product quality by number of ratings, across average product ratings	95
Figure 40: Product quality by average product ratings, across number of ratings	96
Figure 41: Importance of credibility cues for purchasing decisions	97
Figure 42: Male pregnancy hoax Web site	98
Figure 43: Rennets hoax Web site	99
Figure 44: Credibility of male pregnancy hoax Web site	101
Figure 45: Credibility of rennets hoax Web site	102