

Acknowledgments

We are indebted to a great many people who contributed in various ways to this project.

First and foremost, we deeply appreciate the support of the John D. and Catherine T. MacArthur Foundation and in particular the vision, guidance, and intellect of Connie Yowell and Craig Wacker. The MacArthur Foundation's initiative on Digital Media and Learning (DML) has served as a remarkable resource for all those it has supported, and we have benefited immensely from the conversations and help of other DML participants.

We also want to thank Sandra Calvert and Paul Klaczynski, who served as consultants on this project.

A great deal of support has, of course, come from those at the University of California, Santa Barbara, as well. We are fortunate to have as our colleagues the doctoral students also listed on this report and, in addition, we have benefited enormously from the research assistance of a number of talented undergraduate students, including Jennifer Bryan, Jennifer Dossett, Westin Jacobsen, Kaitie Larsen, Cori Ochoa, Kamyab Sadaghiani, Caitie Ulle, and Arrington Walcott. Finally, Katie Bamburg, Jana

Bentley, and Monica Koegler-Blaha have provided invaluable support for this project through the Institute for Social, Behavioral, and Economic Research at UCSB.