

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

The project was funded by the Economic and Social Research Council (ESRC) of the United Kingdom through grant RES-062-23-1914; and by the Leverhulme Trust through grant RPG-044 (under the title “Public Engagement with Genomic Research and Race in Latin America”). My thanks to both organizations. I am very grateful for a British Academy Wolfson Research Professorship (2013–16), which has given me precious time to work on this book (among other things). I appreciate the support given by the School of Social Sciences at the University of Manchester. I would also like to thank all the scientists and others with whom the members of the project team worked in Brazil, Colombia, and Mexico; they were generous with their time and willingness to engage with the team. Thanks as well to the editorial and production team at Duke University Press, especially Gisela Fosado, Lydia Rose Rappoport-Hankins, and Susan Albury. The greatest thanks must, however, go to the team members themselves. On a personal note, I owe a debt of gratitude to my family, especially my wife Sue, for putting up with multiple trips abroad.

....