The “Rethinking Vulnerability and Resistance: Feminism and Social Change” workshop took place at Columbia University’s Global Center in Istanbul, Turkey, September 16–20, 2013. We would like to thank Marianne Hirsch and the Women Creating Change initiative at Columbia University’s Center for the Study of Social Difference for organizing that workshop, which made this book possible. We are also indebted to the Mellon Foundation award to Judith Butler for Distinguished Scholarship in the Humanities that helped to support the event. Our enduring appreciation goes to Ipek Cem-Taha, Rana Zincir, Verda Özer, and Neslihan Berkman of the Istanbul Global Center for accommodating us and coordinating the venue’s heavy schedule. We thank Vina Tran from the Center for the Study of Social Difference for coordinating the event and for all her assistance during that week. We also thank Amanda Armstrong for her invaluable assistance in preparing the manuscript. We would like to acknowledge Nacira Guénif-Souilimas of Paris XIII University, who was an invaluable interlocutor at the workshop. The production staff at Duke University Press has also been enormously helpful throughout this process, and we thank them for all their support. We are most thankful to Ayelet Even-Nur and Saniya Taher for their help with copy-editing, and to Eileen Quam, whose index is invaluable.

This project was assisted through various highly appreciated forms of social and intellectual conversations: we thank Banu Karaca from Sabancı University and the anticensorship organization Siyah Bant, Dilan Okçuoğlu from Queens University, Bade Okçuoğlu from the LGBTQI organization Lambda Istanbul, Özlem Aslan from Feminist Approaches in Culture and Politics, Zelal Yalçın from Mor Çatı Women’s Shelter, Özlem Yasak from the Diyarbakır Democratic Independent Women’s Movement, Müge Sökmen from Metis Publishers and PEN Turkey, Sezen Yalçın from the Socialist Feminist Collective, Volkan Yılmaz from the Social Policy, Sexual Identity and Orientations Research Association, and Nazan Üstündağ from Boğaziçi University, for sharing their views and political struggles with us. We are also thankful to Vuslat Doğan Sabancı of Sabancı Holding for generously inviting us to meet other feminist activists and academics in Istanbul during our stay there.

The workshop took place a few months after the Occupy Gezi movement in Turkey, when the spirit of the uprising was still alive. We were trying to make sense of those events, registering both the exhilaration and the sorrow. So we would like to conclude by extending our gratitude to those bodies on the streets who embodied the promise of an alternative society where vulnerability would cease to be a curse and would instead constitute the very ground for modes of solidarity from below.
