

Acknowledgments

The editors gratefully acknowledge the numerous individuals who made The Rio de Janeiro Reader possible by offering us their time, their expertise, and the fruits of their own scholarly research. Flávio Di Cola, Benjamin Cowan, James N. Green, Monica Grin, Henrique Espada Lima, Bryan McCann, Stuart Schwartz, and Lise Sedrez provided collegial advice, intellectual support, and paleographic insight. We are especially grateful to fellow researchers who were willing to share some gems from their own excursions into the archives and the streets of Rio de Janeiro: Alessandro Angelini, Leandro Benmergui, Paulo Fontes, Ben Penglase, Paula Ribeiro, and Cassia Roth.

We are immensely lucky to have benefited from the historical acuity, linguistic skills, and professionalism of research assistants Andre Pagliarini and Shawn Moura, without whom it is difficult to imagine having completed this book project. We also thank Araceli Centanino, Nathan Dize, Daniel Richter, Raissa Dornelas, Jerry Metz, and Luciana Pinheiro for their research and translation assistance at various stages in this project.

The staffs of numerous libraries, archives, and museums in Rio provided invaluable assistance in locating sometimes evasive materials and in supporting our efforts to publish them. We thank Rosane Coutinho (Arquivo Nacional, Rio de Janeiro), Beatriz Kushnir (Arquivo Geral da Cidade do Rio de Janeiro), Daniella Gomes (Museu Histórico Nacional), and Vera Saboya (Biblioteca Parque de Manguinhos), as well as the staffs of the Arquivo Público do Estado do Rio de Janeiro and the Museu Castro Maya. The staffs of the National Archives in the United Kingdom and the New York Public Library also provided assistance that made possible the research we carried out at each location.

We would like to thank Catalina Toala and Paula Barriga-Sánchez at the University of Maryland for mobilizing the financial and administrative resources needed to complete this project.

Cassia Roth, Chacal and Fernanda Abreu, Claudia Ferreira, Kelly Hayes, and Henrique Tanure generously allowed us to reproduce in this book material for which they hold copyright.
