

Acknowledgments

Many people have helped me during the preparation of this book. In particular, I owe a debt of gratitude to Paul Ginsborg, under whose guidance the project began. He has been both an example to me and an unfailing source of advice and constructive criticism over the years. I also wish to thank David Ellwood, Franco Minganti, Maurizio Vaudagna, Judith Adler Hellman, Stephen Hellman, David Forgacs, Graham McCann, Martin Conway, and Darrow Schecter, all of whom were good enough to comment in detail on earlier drafts of part or all of the manuscript. It is not possible to mention by name all those who were kind enough to share their opinions or experiences with me, but I should like to put on record my gratitude to the following: Luigi Arbizzani, Saveria Bologna, Ugo Casiraghi, Ennio Correnti, the late Pier Paolo D'Attorre, Piero De Sabatta, Fidia Gambetti, the late Michele Pellicani, Catia Mazzeri, Patrick McCarthy, Marisa Musu, Alfio Neri, Patrizia Tabossi, the late Antonello Trombadori, and Albertina Vittoria. Katia Pizzi was an invaluable source of help and encouragement while I was researching this book. I owe much of my knowledge of Italian popular culture to her. Thanks must also be expressed to the staff of the Gramsci Institutes of Bologna and Rome, where much of the documentary research was undertaken. My mother, Doreen Gundle, was generous with material support in the early stages of my research and, with my sister Alison, has been patient in waiting to see the results. The Social Science Research Council (now Economic and Social Research Council), the Fondazione Einaudi, and the British School at Rome provided financial assistance, as did Churchill College, Cambridge, which awarded me a junior research fellowship that was instrumental in granting me the opportunity to develop the work.