

---

Acknowledgments

---

---

---

---

IN the years during which this book was researched and written, the author has accumulated many debts. Intellectual inspiration and an appreciation for the topic's importance were provided by Warren Lerner of Duke University. The School of International Relations of the University of Southern California offered financial support for research in European archives. The manuscript was completed under ideal conditions during a stay as resident fellow with the Peace Studies Program of Cornell University. The author wishes to thank the program's director Richard Ned Lebow and his colleagues Judith Reppy, Larry Scheinmann, Charles Naef, and Kathleen Murphy for their friendship and support during a period of intensive work. Special thanks are due to Mark V. Kauppi for a careful and critical reading of the manuscript and to my wife Kate Cucugliello-Nation for assistance of all kinds. I would also like to express my gratitude to Lars Björlin, Anne-Catherine Folly-Chappuis, Antonio Franzese, Salvatore Frustace, Myron Hedlin, Max Jendly, and William Stivers. All conclusions drawn are of course my own.