A considerable number of people and institutions have contributed to the completion of this work over the past decade. First and foremost, without the generosity and friendship extended to me in Nova Lima by countless individuals this work would not have been possible. Dr. Iguatemy Mendonça, former president of Mineração Morro Velho, S.A., opened up the archives of the St. John d'el Rey and provided tremendous support and enthusiasm for the project. His successor, Dr. Juvenil T. Félix, and Paulo Cesar de Moraes Sarmento, the company commercial director, both provided outstanding support during my research in Nova Lima and Rio de Janeiro. Roberto Lima and Mary Gill went out of their way to open doors for me, and their help and friendship are deeply appreciated. Padre Cônego João Deniz de Valle kindly allowed me access to the parish registers of Nova Lima, and the late Reverend Ariel Walter Alvin graciously permitted me to copy the Anglican parish registers at Morro Velho. I am grateful to José Lúcio Fonseca for giving me full access to the Cartório de Paz e Registro Civil. The prefeitura and câmara municipal both provided access to their records. I would especially like to thank the Brazilians and Anglo-Brazilians who kindly permitted me to interview them about their families and communities. I hope this study does justice to the history they collectively helped create and live.

In Belo Horizonte the staffs of the Arquivo Público Mineiro, the Biblioteca Pública de Minas Gerais, the Departamento Nacional de Produção Mineral, and the Instituto Histórico e Geográfico de Minas Gerais facilitated my research. Douglas Libby, Yonne de Souza Grossi, Eliana Dutra, Amilcar and Roberto Martins, Francisco Iglésias, Maria Efigênia Lage de Rezende, and Hélio Gravatá provided useful suggestions and stimulating conversation. The staff of the United States Consulate in Belo Horizonte provided support and advice on countless occasions. In Ouro Preto I spent pleasant and productive days in the library of the Escola de Minas, Universidade Federal de Ouro Preto, and in the archives of the Centro de Estudos do Ciclo de Ouro, Casa dos Contos. I also received help from the Museu de Ouro in Sabará. In Campinas the late Peter Eisenberg and Michael Hall provided me with good conversation and access to the Arquivo Edgard Leuenroth. In Rio de Janeiro my work was aided by the staffs of the Arquivo Nacional, the Biblioteca Nacional, and the Fundação Casa Rui Barbosa. J. Ivins and Frank Davies allowed me to examine the records of the Morro Velho vice-consulate now in the British Consulate General. At Christ Church in Rio de Janeiro the Reverend Roger Blankley allowed me to copy the parish registers from Gongo Soco and Morro Velho. Vera and José Gomes and their family opened their home to my wife and I on several occasions with warm hospitality.

In Austin, William Callaghan and J. W. F. Dulles both gave me access to their own research and files. The good-natured and conscientious labors of Jane Garner, Wanda Turnley, and Carmen P. Cobas were critical to an intense and productive month in the manuscript section of the Latin American Collection of the University of Texas Library. Bobby Eakin contributed to the project in his own way in Austin. John Wirth, John D. French, and Peter Reich each made helpful suggestions along the way. Tommy Hunt did some of the maps, and Paula Covington provided invaluable bibliographic and research assistance.

Last, but certainly not least, John Burke played a crucial role in the selection of the topic when it began as a doctoral dissertation. E. Bradford Burns guided the dissertation and has done more than anyone else in nurturing my work and my career. Fieldwork in Brazil in 1979–80 was funded by a Fulbright Fellowship, and the Vanderbilt University Research Council financed an additional three months in Brazil in 1985. Steven Topik, Warren Dean, and Thomas F. O'Brien read earlier versions of the manuscript and offered constructive criticism that helped me sharpen and polish my arguments. Finally, I would like to thank my friend and partner, Michelle Beatty-Eakin, for the enormous and incalculable amount of time, effort, and love that she has invested in the author and the project. In her own way, she has brought to life the history of Morro Velho.
