Gratitude points first to the Rockefeller Foundation, at whose Study Center in Bellagio I was a guest when this book was assembled, in idyllic circumstances. It was also facilitated by a semester's sabbatical leave from Duke University. Individuals who have contributed to it include Arthur Kinney, Gary Waller, and Gail Paster, each of whom made valuable suggestions and helped me to place my cards more squarely on the table; Dr. Josef Jařab, Barbara Herrnstein Smith, and Charles Williams, who supplied references I might not have found; Terri Clerico and Phillip Wegner, for valuable practical assistance; and Kevin Sharpe and Steven Zwicker, who not only permitted me to reprint from The Politics of Discourse my first essay on the politics of the fable, but provided the incentive to write it. Finally, I am grateful to my children, for being children no longer, and to my husband, Lee Patterson, whose Bellagio fellowship I was lucky to share as his spouse. Our manuscripts grew side by side on identical laptops and were finished together in congenial collaboration.
