

Note on Japanese Names and Terms

Japanese names are written following the Japanese practice: surname first, given name second. The only exceptions to this rule are the names of Japanese authors who have published in English using Western name order or who, for any reason, have chosen to reverse their name order when publishing in Japanese.

Japanese terms are transcribed with diacritics, except in those cases where a place-name (for example, Tokyo or Kyoto) is well-known in English.
