

Tables

- 4.1 TI Corruption Scores of Five States, 1995–2004 110
- 4.2 Popular Perceptions of the Number of People Involved in Corruption since the Collapse of Communist Power, 2000 114
- 4.3 Popular Perceptions of the Current Scale of Corruption, 2000 114
- 4.4 Popular Perceptions of the Scale of Corruption (Sums of Money or Value of Goods Involved) since the Collapse of Communist Power, 2000 115
- 4.5 Officers and Agencies Perceived as Least and Most Corrupt, 2000 131
- 4.6 Citizens' Perceptions of the Level of Corruption in Various Public Offices and Agencies in Seven Post-communist States, According to World Bank Surveys 132
- 4.7 Combined Results of the World Bank and Holmes Surveys of Public Perceptions of the Level of Corruption in Various Public Offices and Agencies in Eleven Post-communist States 134
- 4.8 Public Officials' Perceptions of the Level of Corruption in Various Public Offices and Agencies in Seven Post-communist States, According to World Bank Surveys 138
- 4.9 Officers and Agencies Perceived as Least and Most Corrupt in China, 2002 140
- 5.1 Popular Perceptions of the Extent to Which Official Corruption Is Undermining the Legitimacy of the Government, 2000 168
- 5.2 Popular Perceptions of the Extent to Which Corruption Affects Political Life, 2002 169
- 6.1 Rank-Ordered Perceived Causes of Corruption, 2000 205
- 7.1 Perceptions of the Role of the Media in Publicizing Corruption, 2000 259
- 7.2 Popular Perceptions of the Probable Future of Corruption, 2000 268

- 7.3 Expectations of Change in the Corruption Situation over the Next Three Years, July 2002 269
- 8.1 Popular Perceptions of the Connections between Official Corruption and Organized Crime, 2000 289
- 8.2 Popular Attitudes toward the Acceptability of Corruption, 2000 293
- 8.3 Popular Attitudes toward the Necessity of Corruption, 2000 294