Four of the contributions (those of Dove, Greenberg, Lansing, and Pálsson) were given in truncated and draft form on the panel that Aletta Biersack and James Greenberg organized for the 1997 annual meeting of the American Anthropological Association in honor of Roy A. Rappaport (“Culture/Power/History/Nature: Papers in Honor of Roy A. Rappaport”). The panel was the second organized session of the newly organized Anthropology and Environment section of the American Anthropological Association (see Crumley, ed., 2001, for the papers of the inaugural session, “Human Dimensions of Environmental Change: Anthropology Engages the Issues”). Alf Hornborg’s paper on the 1997 panel, “Ecological Knowledge and Personhood: Rethinking Cognized Models,” appears as “Ecological Knowledge and Personhood: Have We Always Been Capitalists?” in Ecology and the Sacred, edited by Ellen Messer and Michael Lambek (2001). Conrad Kottak’s paper on this occasion appears as “The New Ecological Anthropology” in “Ecologies for Tomorrow: Reading Rappaport Today,” edited by Aletta Biersack (1999:23–35). Others giving papers on the 1997 panel included Philippe Descola and Jonathan Friedman. Arturo Escobar, Maurice Godelier, and Pete Vayda served as the panel’s very capable discussants. Jim Greenberg and I thank all participants for making the occasion memorable.

We thank Skip Rappaport for encouraging the project and for his years of mentoring. We also thank Ellen Messer and Michael Lambek for discussions in 1996 about Rappaport’s work and how best to mark his passing (see their edited volume Ecology and the Sacred [2001]). We gratefully acknowledge the small grant for artwork preparation received from the Center for Asian and Pacific Studies, University of Oregon, as well as “Target of Opportunity” funds, which were used for artwork preparation. The Nordic Agency for Development and Ecology (NORDECO) of Copenhagen and the Provost’s Author Support Fund of the University of Arizona generously provided subvention support. Quent Winterhoff’s graphic skills and advice and Grace Gardener’s work on color plates 2 to 7 were indispensable for the finalization of the artwork. Jerry Jacka assisted in the early stages of artwork preparation.
