Gratitude grows as I think of people who have schooled me on these topics: Henry Ablove, Stephen Barber, Lauren Berlant, Scott Black, Steven Bruhm, Debra Burrington, Melanee Cherry, Beth Clement, William Cohen, Peter Coviello, Stuart Culver, Ann Cvetkovich, Chris Decaria, Nadja Durbach, Lee Edelman, Angie Elegante and Natalie Avery, Karen Engle, Martha Ertman, Kathryn Flannery, Beth Freeman, Jane Garrity, Jake Grace, J. Halberstam, Randall Halle, Ellis Hanson, Jonathan Gil Harris, Becky Horn, Natasha Hurley, Karen Jacobs, Annamarie Jagose, Ratna Kapur, David Kennedy, Marilee Lindemann, Joe Litvak, Dana Luciano, Heather Lukes, Stacey Margolis, Ellen McCallum, Molly McGarry, Tom McWhorter, Madhavi Menon, José Muñoz, Mary Ann O'Farrell, Stephanie Pace, Ann Pellegrini, Ellen Pollak, Masha Raskolnikov, Todd Reeser, Jocelyn Romano, Stella Rozanski, Martha Nell Smith, and especially Barry Weller, who gave such kind and careful help in this book's final stages. And a shout goes out to my intellectual comrades in the canyons — Laura Briggs and Lisa Duggan — for their love of ledges and talking while walking.

I have felt tremendously supported in Utah: by my department and its chairs, Stuart Culver and Vincent Pecora; by my dean, Robert Newman; by Associate Vice-President for Diversity Karen Dace, and now her successor, Octavio Villalpando; and especially by my students, both graduate and undergraduate, in a range of literature and theory courses, particularly those in "Queer Theory," "Canonical Perversions," and "The Semiotics of Race." The Gender Studies Program has been my second home, both intellectual and political, and warmest, deepest thanks are owed to my associate director Gerda Saunders, whose intellect, modesty, and kindness humble me, and my inspiring colleagues Matt Basso, Günseli Berik, Kandi Brinkman, Lisa Diamond, Kirsten Jorgenson, Jo Tiffany Merrill, Ella Myers, Susie Porter, Nick Russell, Angela Smith, Chris Talbot, Jodee Taylor, and Claudia Wright. Once again, in bringing a book to completion, I have been graced to work with kt farley, whose sheer cleverness endlessly charms me, and Erin Menut, whose exquisite astuteness anchors me.

And, again, I have been lucky to be in the hands of the people at Duke University Press: my incomparable editor, Ken Wissoker, who has singularly nurtured this project; his assistant, Mandy Earley, who has been enormously helpful, responsive, and fun to work with; and Molly Balikov, who has gracefully led me to the finish (where the magic of Amy Ruth Buchanan has me covered). Michael Cobb and a second, anonymous reader for the press made incisive, wonderfully smart, and persuasive suggestions for revision, alongside their evident intellectual generosity.

Three previously published essays of mine have lent materials to this book, ideas appearing here with kind permission from the publishers: my essay “Growing Sideways, or Versions of the Queer Child: The Ghost, the Homosexual, the Freudian, the Innocent, and the Interval of Animal,” in the collection Curiouser, ed. Steven Bruhm and Natasha Hurley (Minneapolis: University of Minnesota Press, 2004): 277–315; “Eve’s Queer Child,” from Regarding Sedgwick: Essays on Queer Culture and Critical Theory, ed. Stephen M. Barber and David L. Clark (New York: Routledge, 2002): 181–99; and “Feeling Like Killing? Queer Temporalities of Murderous Motives among Queer Children,” in GLQ: A Journal of Lesbian and Gay Studies 13: 2–3 (2007): 301–25.

In many respects, this book owes its life and support to several of my favorite playmates: Dave, Judy, Adam, Jonathan, Julie, and Harriett, who have emboldened my thinking and living; my parents, Ed and Marilyn, who, not knowing who or what they had before them, loved what they found, which I will not forget; and Shelley White, my household saint, who has birthed me forward and backward simultaneously, as only she could.
