

Acknowledgments

This book has had a long gestation period, and we have benefited from the assistance and advice of many people. We want to thank the following people in particular for their help: our editor at Duke University Press, Valerie Millholland, for her patience and support; Robin D. G. Kelley, Philip Deloria, J. F. (Frank) de la Teja, and Martha Menchaca for helping us round up some contributors; two of our former students from Macalester College, Adam Waterman and Brett Baldwin, for early research assistance; Katrina Chapelas and Diana Witt for their work on the index; the anonymous reviewers of the book for Duke University Press for their helpful comments; and, most importantly, our great contributors. We are deeply appreciative of George Lipsitz for writing the afterword. We couldn't have asked for a better end to our work on the book.

Bruce Baum would also like to thank his parents, Rosalyn and Charles Baum, and three contributors who offered extra help along the way: Joel Olson, Ben Keppel, and, especially, for her love and friendship, Laura Janara, who may be as happy as he and Duchess are to see this project finished. Bruce dedicates his work on the book to his niece, Jessica Stuart, with love, in the hope that her generation will realize more fully the promise of America in a more just and peaceful world.

Duchess Harris would like to thank the Mellon Mays Undergraduate Fellowship and the Woodrow Wilson Career Enhancement Fellowship for their generous support; the Macalester College American Studies Department; Jane Rhodes, Karin Aguilar-San Juan, Jason Ruiz, and Kathie Scott; and for their careful readings Nikol Alexander-Floyd, Sarita McCoy Gregory, Hilary Jones, and Evelyn M. Simien. She is also grateful for the love of her children: Austin Harris Thomas, Avril Noelle Thomas, and Zachary Harris Thomas. Duchess dedicates her work on the book to the memory of her father Frank Harris Jr. (1934–2007) and to the two pillars who hold her up: her husband, Jon V. Thomas, and her mother, Miriam M. Harris.

.....

Some of the essays in this book have been published previously: Laura Janara's essay was originally published in a longer version under the title "Brothers and Others: Tocqueville and Beaumont, U.S. Genealogy, Democracy, and Racism," in Political Theory 32 (December 2004): 773–800; some material in Cari M. Carpenter's essay appeared in her book Seeing Red: Anger, Sentimentality, and American Indians (Columbus: Ohio State University Press, 2008) and in "Tiresias Speaks: Sarah Winnemucca's Hybrid Selves and Genres," Legacy: A Journal of American Women Writers 19, no. 1 (2002): 71–80; the essay on Samuel Gompers is abridged from Gwendolyn Mink, Old Labor and New Immigrants in American Political Development: Union, Party, and State, 1875–1920 (Ithaca: Cornell University Press, 1986), chapter 3; Gary Gerstle's essay, "Theodore Roosevelt and the Divided Character of American Nationalism," is a revised version of an essay that originally appeared under the same title in the Journal of American History 86 (December 1999): 1280–1307; Joel Olson's essay was published under the same title, "W. E. B. Du Bois and the Race Concept," in SOULS: A Critical Journal of Black Politics, Culture, and Society 7, no. 3–4.