

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

In a way, this book began with, and has been consistently propelled by, invitations from friends to talk about Mexican photography and cinema in relation to issues of national identity: Janet Esser Brody at San Diego State University, Randal Johnson at the University of California at Los Angeles, Ryan Long at Oklahoma University, Eric Zolov at Franklin & Marshall College, Pedro Castillo at the University of California at Santa Cruz, Wendy Adelman at the Museum of Art and History in Santa Cruz, Paolo Knauss at the Universidade Federal Fluminense, Luis Ignacio Sainz at the Universidad Autónoma Metropolitana, Alejandro Castellanos at the Centro de la Imagen, John Perivolaris at the University of Manchester, Seth Fein at Yale University, Jim Krippner at Haverford College, Francisco Mata at the Universidad Autónoma Metropolitana-Xochimilco, Kazuyasu Ochai at Hitotsubashi University, Greg Crider at Wingate University, and Jaime Vélez and Fernando Osorio at the Escuela Nacional de Conservación, Restauración y Museografía. I thank them all for the stimulating exchanges that accompanied and followed my lectures. I am also grateful to Natalie Hartman, director of Latin American Studies at Duke University, for publishing a working paper, Envisioning Mexico: Photography and National Identity, which was a very early attempt to organize my thoughts about this topic.

The privileged conditions provided by the Instituto de Ciencias Sociales y Humanidades “Alfonso Vélez Pliego” of the Universidad Autónoma de Puebla made it possible to carry out this work. I have tried to express what I owe to Alfonso Vélez, founder of ICSyH, in dedicating this book to him. I would also like to thank Roberto Vélez Pliego and Agustín Grajales Porras, who, as directors of ICSyH, permitted me to structure my teaching around this book's topic and displayed great comprehension of my absences during its writing.

This book could not have been written without the research of Mexican scholars in the history of their visual culture, as well as the many interlocutors who have helped me understand the country in which I have chosen to live: Jaime Vélez, Ariel Arnal, Patricia Massé, Fernando Aguayo, Ricardo Pérez Montfort, Rebeca Monroy, Rosa Casanova, Juan Carlos Valdéz, Arturo Aguilar, Beatriz Malagón, Ángel Miquel, Daniel Escorza, Miguel Ángel Berumen, José Luis Sánchez Estevez, Maricela González Cruz, Alberto del Castillo, Francisco Montellano, Julia Tuñon, Jack Lach, Ana Lau, Mari-Carmen de Lara, Polo Best, Gonzalo Rocha, Lucero González, Waldemaro Concha, Jimmy Montané Pérez, Jorge Luís Reyes, Elsa Medina, Pedro Valtierra, and Enrique Villaseñor. I thank all of them for our interchanges, and I would also like to recognize the labors of Pablo Ortiz Monasterio, Alfonso Morales, and José Antonio Rodríguez, who as editors of Luna Córnea and Alquimia have provided crucial forums for histories of Mexican photography.

I am grateful to the following friends for answering questions that arose in the course of writing this book: Jack Womack, Francisco Mata, John Hart, Paul Vanderwood, Drew Wood, Rodrigo Moya, and Pedro Meyer.

I thank the following for their extraordinary generosity in aiding me to provide images for this book. My primo político, Armando Bartra, allowed me to ransack his collection of Presente, a magazine unavailable in any public archive. Salvador Plancarte, sub-director de la Filmoteca de la Universidad Nacional Autónoma de México (UNAM), has been a constant source of information as well as materials on cinema. Several photographers gave me images from their archives: Rodrigo Moya, Héctor García, Elsa Medina, Pedro Valtierra, and Pedro Meyer. Ángel Miquel offered me pictures from his personal collection, as did Marco Buenrostro. Fernando Osorio, director of the Dirección de Artes Visuales de la Fundación Televisa aided me in obtaining access to that collection. Emma Cecilia García gave me a helping hand in approaching the collection of Manuel Álvarez Bravo, and I am grateful to Aurelia Álvarez Urvatjel for her assistance.

The time I spent working with Ana Mauad at the Universidade Federal Fluminense in Rio de Janeiro was invaluable in clarifying certain issues, and I am grateful to the Coordenação de Aperfeiçoamento de Pessoal de Nível Superior (CAPES), Ministério da Educação of Brazil for giving me a fellowship during 2004–2005. I also thank Professors Toshio Yanagida and Genaro Castro-Vázquez, of Keio University in Tokyo for enabling my access to facilities there.

Marysa Navarro gave me love and hell just when I needed it.

Gustavo Cubero assisted me throughout the writing of this work, and over the past few years I have given courses on this book's topics, in which a number of students have made invaluable observations, including Alejandra López Camacho, Ivan González Nolasco, Dolores Cabrera, Esther Cuatzón, Fidel Pérez, Noel Merino, and Osbaldo Zuñiga.

I thank Chuck Churchill, Paul Vanderwood, and Ryan Long for reading and critiquing parts of this book, and the anonymous readers for Duke University Press for their comments on the manuscript.

Finally, I once again acknowledge the constant and critical presence, and participation, of Eli Bartra, who read and commented on the entire book. I thank her for her help, her patience, and her love. This work has been a long haul for her as well.

None of this book's text has appeared in the form it takes here. However, earlier versions of some sections were published in the following works:

Essays on Emilio Fernández, Gabriel Figueroa, Fernando de Fuentes, Redes, Jorge Negrete, Pedro Infante, Sara Garcia, María Félix, and Cantinflas, in The International Dictionary of Films and Filmmakers, 4 vol. (London and Chicago: St. James and Macmillan Presses, 1984–87). Republished as www.filmreference.com (Thomson Gale, 2006).

"Foto Hermanos Mayo: A Mexican Collective," History of Photography 17, no. 1 (1993).

"How Real Is Reel? Fernando de Fuentes's Revolutionary Trilogy," in Framing Latin American Cinema: Contemporary Critical Perspectives, ed. Ann Marie Stock (Minneapolis: University of Minnesota Press, 1997).

"Manuel Alvarez Bravo," in Encyclopedia of Twentieth-Century Photography, ed. Lynne Warren (London: Routledge, 2006).

"Mexico/USA: Visual Transculturation and National Identity," Transit Circle: Revista Brasileira de Estudos Americanos 5 (2006).

- La mirada inquieta: Nuevo fotoperiodismo mexicano: 1976–1996* (Mexico City: Centro de la Imagen, 1996).
- “Moreno Reyes, Mario (Cantinflas), 1913–1993, Actor and Comedian,” in Encyclopedia of Mexico: History, Society and Culture, ed. Michael S. Werner (Chicago: Fitzroy Dearborn Publishers, 1997).
- “Negrete, Jorge, 1911–1953, Actor and Singer,” in Encyclopedia of Mexico: History, Society and Culture, ed. Michael S. Werner (Chicago: Fitzroy Dearborn Publishers, 1997).
- “The New Photojournalism of Mexico, 1976–1998,” History of Photography 22, no. 4 (1998).
- “Photographing Mexico,” Mexican Studies / Estudios Mexicanos 17, no. 1 (2001).
- “Picturing Mexico’s Past: Photography and Historia Gráfica,” South Central Review 21, no. 3 (2004).
- “Representing the Mexican Revolution: Bending Photographs to the Will of Historia Gráfica,” in Photography and Writing in Latin America, ed. Marcy E. Schwartz and Mary Beth Tierney-Tello (Albuquerque: University of New Mexico Press, 2006).
- “The Revolution Is History: Filming the Past in Mexico and Cuba,” Film Historia 9, no. 2 (1999).
- “La trilogía revolucionaria de Fernando de Fuentes,” in El cine mexicano a través de la crítica, ed. Gustavo García and David Maciel (Mexico City: Universidad Nacional Autónoma de México, 2001).
- “Valdés, Germán (Tin Tan), 1915–1973, Comedian,” in Encyclopedia of Mexico: History, Society and Culture, ed. Michael S. Werner (Chicago: Fitzroy Dearborn Publishers, 1997).
- With Eli Bartra: “As duas Fridas: História e identidades transculturais,” Estudos Feministas 13, no. 2 (2005); “Las Dos Fridas: History and Transcultural Identities,” Rethinking History 9, no. 4 (2005); “Las Dos Fridas: Historia e identidades transculturales,” Secuencia: Revista de historia y ciencias sociales 65 (2006).
- With Jaime Vélez Storey: Trasterrados: braceros vistos por los Hermanos Mayo (Mexico City: Archivo General de la Nación, 2005); Uprooted: Braceros in the Hermanos Mayo Lens (Houston: Arte Público Press, 1996).