

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

I'd like to thank my family for all their inspiration and support over the years: Joung-ja Kawashima, my loving mother; and Kimi Kawashima, my Supreme Sistah. Most of all, I would like to dedicate this book to the memory of my father, Fujiya Kawashima, who taught me a great deal about Japan, Korea, history, and art.

I count myself as one of the lucky ones to have known and worked with historian Harry Harootunian for such a long time. He's been an intellectual inspiration since my undergraduate days at the University of Chicago, and he has guided my studies, research, and thinking in a thousand and one ways ever since. This book simply could not have been written had it not been for his tireless support and intellectual companionship.

Katsuhiko Mariano Endo has saved my life more than once in addition to enlightening me with the finer points of Uno Kōzō's methodology; and Rebecca Karl has been a one-in-a-million teacher and friend since my days at NYU. I'd like to also thank Hyun Ok Park, Bill Haver, Louise Young, Sabu Kohso, Bruce Cumings, Tets Najita, Tak Fujitanti, Matsumoto Takenori, Nagahara Yutaka, Higuchi Yuichi, Oki Kosuke, Sato Takashi, Adachi Mariko, Jesook Song, Andre Schmid, Ritu Birla, Kanishka Goonewardena, Gavin Smith, Atsuko Sakaki, Eric Cazdyn, Janice Kim, Robert Albritton, Shivrang Setlur, C-Murda Vernon, Olga Fedorenko, and Sun-young Yang. Lastly, Sugar Brown expresses musical thanks to Rockin' Johnny Burgin, Taildragger, Dave Waldman, Sho'nuff Sho, Suzuki Sue, Watanabe Satoshi, Noma Ichiro, Samm Bennett, Haruna Ito, Paul Dutton, Dr. Feelgood, The Wolf of Nitouk, and Bob Vespaziani.

I originally completed the archival research for this project between 1998 and 2000 at the Ohara Institute for Social Problems (Hōsei University), where Suzuki Akira, Sadamori-san, and Iida-san were especially kind and helpful to me. Generous research grants from the Fulbright Foundation and Hōsei University's International Fellowship made that research possible.

Last but not least, I'd like to thank Reynolds Smith, Neal McTighe, Emily Bliss, Sharon Torian, and Celia Braves of Duke University Press for their enthusiasm and cooperation in publishing this book.
