

Acknowledgments

This book began with a series of interrelated panel discussions on security and space in Guatemala City, including a double-panel at the 2006 American Anthropological Association Annual Meeting in San Jose, California. We are grateful to the participants in these sessions, especially Carol A. Smith and Timothy J. Smith, who both provided thoughtful and incisive comments in their roles as discussants in 2006. We are also grateful to our contributors for being responsive to our queries and for their patience during the review process. Many thanks to Indiana University, Bloomington, for supporting the translation of Manuela Camus's essay from Spanish into English by Michael Mosier. Thank you to James L. Watson for the direction he provided in the volume's initial stages and for his suggestions regarding the volume title. The anonymous reviewers at Duke University Press provided invaluable insights that greatly improved the quality of the final manuscript. In addition, we would like to thank Valerie Millholland, Miriam Angress, Amanda Sharp, and Mark Mastromarino for their support throughout the publication process. Shruti Krishnan of Indiana University also provided important assistance during the production process.

Portions of the essay "Guatemala's New Violence as Structural Violence," by Peter Benson, Kedron Thomas, and Edward F. Fischer were previously published as "Resocializing Suffering: Neoliberalism, Accusation, and the Sociopolitical Context of Guatemala's New Violence," Latin American Perspectives 35(5):38–58. An earlier version of the essay "Spaces of Structural Adjustment in Guatemala's Apparel Industry," by Kedron Thomas was published as "Structural Adjustment, Spatial Imaginaries, and 'Piracy' in Guatemala's Apparel Industry," Anthropology of Work Review 30(1):1–10. Kevin Lewis O'Neill's essay, "Hands of Love" was published by the University of California Press in City of God: Christian Citizenship in Postwar Guatemala (2010). The remaining essays have not appeared previously.
