

Contributors

TRIPTA CHANDOLA is an urban ethnographer and Postdoctoral Fellow at the Indian Institute for Human Development in Delhi. In her research experience, spanning more than fifteen years, she has explored different facets of the everyday in the lives of those living on the margins through different tropes and lenses of engagement. She holds a doctorate from Queensland University of Technology, Brisbane, Australia, has published several journal articles and book chapters, and coproduced the BBC radio documentary Govindpuri Sounds, based on her doctoral research. She is the author of Listening into Others: An Exploration in Ethnography (2019, Institute of Network Cultures, Amsterdam).

MICHELE FRIEDNER is Assistant Professor of Comparative Human Development at the University of Chicago and the author of Valuing Deaf Worlds in Urban India (2015, Rutgers University Press).

LOUISE MEINTJES is Associate Professor of Music and Cultural Anthropology at Duke University and the author of Sound of Africa! Making Music Zulu in a South Africa Studio (2003) and Dust of the Zulu: Ngoma Aesthetics after Apartheid (2017), both published by Duke University Press.

JAIRO MORENO teaches music theory at the University of Pennsylvania. He is the author of Musical Representations, Subjects, and Objects (2004, Indiana University Press) and Syncopated Modernities: Musical Latin Americanisms in the US, 1978–2008 (forthcoming, University of Chicago Press).

ANA MARÍA OCHOA GAUTIER is a Professor in the Department of Music at Columbia University. Her work concerns the global politics of music circulation and histories and anthropologies of aurality in Latin America and the Caribbean.

MICHAEL BIRENBAUM QUINTERO is Assistant Professor of Musicology and Ethnomusicology at Boston University. He writes about the music of black Colombians, cultural politics, violence and trauma, black cosmopolitanism, and vernacular uses of technology. He is the author of Rites, Rights and Rhythms: A Genealogy of Musical Meaning in Colombia's Black Pacific (2018, Oxford University Press).

JEFF ROY is a Postdoctoral Fellow with the Centre d'Études de l'Inde et de l'Asie du Sud for "Projet Autoritas: Modes d'Autorité et Conduites Esthétiques de l'Asie du Sud à l'Insulinde." He holds a doctorate in ethnomusicology from the University of California, Los Angeles, and has taught in the Department of Communication Studies at California State University, Northridge. His work focuses on transgender and hijrā music and dance through the lens of documentary filmmaking. Roy has recently published articles in Ethnomusicology, MUSICultures, and Transgender Studies Quarterly.

JESSICA A. SCHWARTZ is Assistant Professor of Musicology at the University of California, Los Angeles. She is the author of Radiation Sounds: Marshallese Music and Nuclear Silences (forthcoming, Duke University Press) and is working on a book on listening practices and technologies shaped by the presence of nuclear weaponry in the United States. She is the cofounder and academic advisor of the Marshallese Educational Initiative, an Arkansas-based nonprofit.

SHAYNA SILVERSTEIN is Assistant Professor of Performance Studies at Northwestern University. Her research examines the intersection of sound and movement as modalities of performance, with a focus on contemporary Syrian culture and society.

GAVIN STEINGO is Assistant Professor of Music at Princeton University. He is the author of Kwaito's Promise: Music and the Aesthetics of Freedom in South Africa (2016, University of Chicago Press). With Jairo Moreno, he edits the Critical Conjunctions in Music and Sound book series for Oxford University Press.

JIM SYKES is Assistant Professor of Music at the University of Pennsylvania. He is the author of The Musical Gift: Sonic Generosity in Post-War Sri Lanka (2018, Oxford University Press) and is working on a book about Hindu sounds, labor, and capitalism in Singapore.

BENJAMIN TAUSIG is Assistant Professor of Ethnomusicology at Stony Brook University. His research focuses on sound, protest, and Asian modernity, and he is the author of Bangkok Is Ringing: Sound, Protest, and Constraint (2018, Oxford University Press).

HERVÉ TCHUMKAM is Associate Professor of French and Francophone Postcolonial Studies and associate of the John G. Tower Center for Political Studies at Southern Methodist University. He is the author of several articles and book chapters, coeditor of a volume on postcolonial exile and migrations, and editor of two special issues of scholarly journals devoted to postcolonial Francophone studies and to philosophy and the social sciences. He is the author of State Power, Stigmatization, and Youth Resistance Cultures in the French Banlieues: Uncanny Citizenship (2015, Lexington Books).