Living with the Shore Book Series

State-Specific Shoreline Risk Books

The following is a list of books from the Living with the Shore series published by Duke University Press, written by experts from the various states and edited by Orrin Pilkey and William Neal. These state-specific books provide risk maps based on storms and shoreline erosion rather than sea level rise. Each book has maps showing the entire shoreline of the state and the risk to development, from extreme to moderate. The maps in these books, some of which are out of date, should still be useful for prospective homeowners. The general rule to follow is: don't live on the beachfront, no matter what the classification is in these books or on the FEMA maps.
