

Acknowledgments

I would like to thank the inestimable efforts of Elizabeth Ault, Kate Herman, Ken Wissoker, and the Duke University Press publication team, including Maria Volpe, freelance editor Christi Stanforth, and Chris Crochetière of BW&A Books, as well as two anonymous reviewers who provided many important criticisms and suggestions; my PhD adviser at CUNY, Geoffrey Batchen; Okwui Enwezor, Candace Keller, Esra Akin-Kivanç, Rodney Mayton, Wallace Wilson, USF Publication Grant, Elisabeth Fraser, and Jeanie Ambrosio; the photographers whom I interviewed or studied and who provided essential information and images for my project, including Fatoumata Diabaté, Alioune Bâ, Seydou Keïta, Malick Sidibé, Mountaga Dembélé, Agence Nationale d'Information Malienne (ANIM), Hamidou Maïga, Adama Kouyaté, Soungalo Malé, El Hadj Tijani Àdìgún Sitou, Lennart Nilsson, Mayola Amici, Dawoud Bey, Lorna Simpson, Rotimi Fani-Kayode, Françoise Huguier, Felix Diallo, Mamadou Konaté, Emmanuel Daou, Sadio Diakité, Madame Coulibaly Diawara, Harandane Dicko, Abdoulaye Kanté, Moussa Konaté, Aboubacrine Diarra, Samuel Sidibé, Jude Thera, Shawn Davis, Siriman Dembélé, Érika Nimis, Adama Bamba, Mamadou Konaté, Moussa Kalapo, Abdourahmane Sakaly, Sidiki Sidibé, François Deschamps, Adama Diakité, Joseye Tienro, Youssouf Sogodogo, Amadou Sow, Promo-femme, Madame Aminata Dembélé Bagayoko and Kadiatou Sangaré, Penda Diakité, Alimata dite Diop Traoré, Ouassa Pangassy Sangaré, Cinéma Numérique Ambulant (CNA), Stéphanie Dongmo, Tendance Floue, Meyer, Zanele Muholi, Mohamed Camara, Amadou Keïta, and Django Cissé, as well as essential help in communicating with the artists and many other matters from Yoby Guindo and Bakary Sidibé. Cherif Keïta, Laurel Bradley, and Doug Foxgrover were instrumental to our show at the Perlman Teaching Museum at Carleton College and to providing images for the book. I would like to thank Molleen Theodore, Amanda Preuss, Laura Colkitt, Marlena Antonucci, James Cartwright, Alexandria Salmieri, Vikki Mann, Nina Murayama, Karen Shelby, Nat Trotman, Beth Mangini, Megan Fort, Jill Lord, Yvette Lee, Clay Tarica, Kate Bussard, Dan Quiles, Kevin Mulhearn, Stéphanie Jeanjean, Elizabeth Watson, Laura Hengehold, Samara Sanders, Eric Lindberg, and their children Leif and Leila, Ryan Roberge, Joanna Lehan, Artur Walther, Sarah Brett-Smith, Susan Vogel, Kristina Van Dyke, Michelle Lamunière, Marta Weiss, and Nat Bletter. From CUNY Graduate Center, I would like to thank Patricia Mainardi, Rosemarie Haag Bletter, Romy Golan, and Francesca Canadé-Sautman. I also appreciate the Mario Capelloni Dissertation Fellowship, which helped me to finish my initial project, as well as many gallerists who provided crucial help in obtaining images and permissions, especially Jack Bell; Laneese Jaftha of Stevenson Gallery; Rebecca Mecklenborg and Evalina Sundbye of Jack Shainman Gallery; James Flach and Eva-Lotta Holm-Flach of Gallerie Flach, Stockholm; Elisabeth Whitelaw of the CAAC; and Thaïs Giordano of Gallerie Magnin-A in Paris.

Small sections of the introduction and of chapters 6 and 7 have been published in revised form as articles. A heavily reduced and revised version of chapter 6 was published as “Promo-femme: Promoting Women Photographers in Bamako, Mali,” in History of Photography 34, no. 2 (2010). Parts of the introduction and chapter 7 were published as “A Lightness of Vision: The Poetics of Relation in Malian Art Photography” in Social Dynamics: A Journal of African Studies (September 2014) and reproduced in a book anthology, Photography in and out of Africa: Iterations with Difference, ed. Kylie Thomas and Louise Green (Routledge, 2017). Chapter 7 was inspired by an exhibition for Carleton College’s Perlman Teaching Museum, Photographing the Social Body: Malian Portraiture from the Studio to the Street.

On a personal note, I thank my mother-in-law, Abby Wasserman, for her continual help, encouragement, and support, especially after the children were born. I thank my brother and sister-in-law, Eric Moore and Leeyanne Moore. I am so grateful to my parents, Zelda and David Moore, for their amazing love and support throughout my life, through many years of school and writing this book—they have always been there for me. A tremendous amount of gratitude is due to Joshua Rayman, without whom this book literally would not exist. Finally, I would like to thank my beautiful children, Isolde and Cormac, for their love and patience. This book is dedicated to my family.
