We thank the University of Notre Dame Institute for Scholarship in the Liberal Arts for their generous support. We also thank participants and auditors in the seminar on “Intersectional Spaces,” led by Paula J. Massood and Pamela Robertson Wojcik, at the 2018 Society for Cinema and Media Studies (SCMS) Conference in Toronto; panelists and attendees at the panel “Screening Intersectional Spaces,” chaired by Elizabeth Patton, at the 2019 SCMS conference in Seattle; participants in the faculty writing workshop organized by the Department of English and Comparative Literature at San Diego State University; and participants and attendees of the panel on “Virtuality and Materiality in Digital Texts” at the 2018 Children’s Literature Association conference. The anonymous readers and our editor, Elizabeth Ault, at Duke University Press provided invaluable insight and guidance. Angel thanks his loved ones, colleagues, and family for their constant guidance and support. Pam and Paula especially thank Angel, who proved an excellent partner and collaborator on this, his first edited collection. Finally, the editors thank our contributors. Often, volumes such as this suffer from scheduling setbacks related to late submissions and other delays; these contributors made the process a true joy with their professionalism and intellectual rigor.
