

Acknowledgments

SINCE THIS RESEARCH BEGAN, I have interviewed and spent time with different kinds of biomedical prescribers (psychiatrists, general practitioners, rural medical practitioners); with people at Indian pharmaceutical companies (especially those working in marketing); and with pharmacists, distributors, and health policy experts. The fieldwork and writing were supported by the Economic and Social Science Research Council; the Medical Research Council; the Brocher Foundation; the Studienstiftung des Deutschen Volkes; and the School of Social and Political Science, University of Edinburgh. I was fortunate to present ideas and earlier versions of book chapters in Aberdeen, Amsterdam, Berkeley, Berlin, Bielefeld, Brighton, Cambridge, Chiang Mai, Chicago, Copenhagen, Denver, Dehradun, Durham, Frankfurt, Glasgow, Greifswald, Heidelberg, Hermance, Honolulu, Istanbul, Kathmandu, Kolkata, Konstanz, Lancaster, Leiden, Liverpool, London, Oxford, Malta, Maynooth, Mérida, Minneapolis, Montreal, New Delhi, New Haven, Paris, Prague, Rotterdam, San Francisco, Santa Fe, Sheffield, Vancouver, Washington, DC, Waterville, York, and Zurich. My thanks to all of the wonderful hosts and organizers. Some material that this book draws on has previously been published in journals (Ecks 2005, 2008, 2015) and edited volumes (Ecks 2010, 2011, 2017, 2021).

This book on value could not have been written without the invaluable support of friends and colleagues. First, I thank all of my fieldwork respondents in India for sharing with me what matters in their lives. Among so many friends in India I want to give special thanks to Anirban Das and Rumela Roy for their incredible help and inspiration. Dodo Lahiri and the late Shanu Lahiri gave me a home away from home. Tea with Suhasini Kejriwal was always a highlight. Soumita Basu has been an outstanding research assistant and collaborator over many years. For all their feedback, ideas, and puzzled questions I thank Vincanne Adams, Marcos Andrade Neves, Kalman Applbaum, Daan Beekers, Dominique Béhague, Dorte Bemme, Katrin Beushausen, Sanjoy Bhattacharya, João

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

Biehl, Cristobal Bonelli, Tom Boylston, Bridget Bradley, Petra Brhlikova, Carlo Caduff, Claire Carlisle, Janet Carsten, Arijit Chakraborty, Partha Chatterjee, Haidan Chen, Nancy Chen, Lawrence Cohen, Nathan Coombs, Rachel Cooper, Jacob Copeman, Magnus Course, Ivan Crozier, Thomas Csordas, Kit Davis, Carl Denig, Klaus Ebmeier, Alex Edmonds, Susan Erikson, Wendy Espeland, Kirk Fiereck, Tine Gammeltoft, Danya Glabau, David Graeber, Tapati Guha-Thakurta, Murphy Halliburton, Anita Hardon, Rachel Harkness, Ian Harper, John Harris, Cori Hayden, David Healy, Julia Hornberger, Ema Hrešanová, Elisabeth Hsu, Juli Huang, Tim Ingold, Sushrut Jadhav, Sumeet Jain, Deborah James, Janis Jenkins, Kriti Kapila, Lilian Kennedy, Karina Kielmann, Laurence Kirmayer, Junko Kitanaka, Madlen Kobi, James Laidlaw, Claudia Lang, Zohar Lederman, Annette Leibing, Julie Livingston, Angus MacBeth, Donald MacKenzie, Roslyn Malcolm, Rebecca Marsland, Emily Martin, Kaaren Mathias, Sandra Matz, Linsey McGoe, Jonathan Metzl, Axel Michaels, China Mills, Jim Mills, James Mittra, Annemarie Mol, Projit Mukharji, Mark Nichter, Michael Oldani, Aihwa Ong, David Orr, Martyn Pickersgill, Stacey Pigg, Laurent Pordié, Johannes Quack, Mohan Rao, Ophra Rebiere, Peter Redfield, Tobias Rees, Gael Robertson, Nikolas Rose, Emilia Sanabria, Jamie Saris, Bo Sax, Ulrich Schwabach, Lesley Sharp, Margaret Sleeboom-Faulkner, Matthew Smith, Wolfgang Sofksy, Alice Street, Steve Sturdy, Samuel Taylor Alexander, Maya Unnithan, Ross Upshur, Ayo Wahlberg, and Thomas Widlok. I thank the late Hubert Dreyfus for discussing Heidegger's Mitsein with me. Trenholme Junghans's workshop in Cambridge changed my perspective on commensuration and value—thank you. I am grateful to all the great staff at Duke University Press, especially Ken Wissoker and Elizabeth Ault. Preparing the Valuing Health conference in 2018 pushed me to think through value more than ever before; many thanks to all the participants. I also thank my students, especially those in my medical and economic anthropology classes at Edinburgh University. Trigger warning: this book will mention biocommensuration.