

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

I owe a great and probably unpayable debt to Carol Gluck for taking the time to thoroughly read an earlier version of the manuscript for this book, systematically going through the writing and arguments and vastly improving both. My thanks go to Hyun Ok Park and Gavin Walker for their valuable comments and observations, which I have tried to incorporate. Thanks also go to two anonymous readers who raised important questions about the manuscript (which I have sought to satisfy) and to Kristin Ross for her continuing and perceptive reflections on the difficult problem of the changing relationship between politics and culture, which is at the heart of this book. I also want to remember and thank the members of the reading group in which I have been a participant for the intellectual companionship they have provided: Laura Neitzel, Carol Gluck, Kim Brandt, Alan Tansman, Ramona Bajema, Yukiko Hanawa, Marilyn Ivy, Yukiko Koga, Brian Hurley, Jack Wilson, Tom Looser, Andrea Arai, Janet Poole, Louise Young, Hyun Ok Park, Tom LaMarre, and Chris Nelson.

I want to thank Ken Wissoker, Senior Executive Editor at Duke University Press, for years of constant support for innumerable projects dealing with the Asia-Pacific region and my own work. I also want to thank Jessica Ryan, Editorial Production Manager, for her crucial help during the process of reading over an unreasonable example of copyediting of the manuscript. I also want to thank Nancy Rose Hunt, a coeditor of the series Theory in Forms, particularly for her encouragement of the project realized in this book.