
Irmgard Emmelhainz is a writer and researcher based in Mexico City. Her work on film, the Palestine Question, art, culture, and neoliberalism has been translated into many languages, and she has presented it in an array of international settings. Recent publications include The Sky Is Incomplete: Travel Chronicles in Palestine (2017) and Jean-Luc Godard’s Political Filmmaking (2019).

Raino Isto is currently a fellow at the Educational Video Center in New York City and is editor-in-chief of ARTMargins Online. His practice focuses on integrating social justice with arts education for youth in both urban and rural contexts. His work has been published in Third Text, Science Fiction Studies, Extrapolation, International Labor and Working-Class History, and The Getty Research Journal.

Mohammadreza Mirzaei is a PhD candidate in the Department of the History of Art and Architecture at the University of California, Santa Barbara. Mirzaei’s articles have appeared in such journals as Herfeh: Honarmand, Kaarnamaa, and Tandis. He is a coeditor of issue 51 of Herfeh: Honarmand, devoted to Italian photography, and the translator of Stefano Benni’s Grammatica di Dio from Italian into Persian (2014).

Bruno Moreschi is a postdoctoral fellow at the University of São Paulo and a multidisciplinary artist with a PhD in Arts at the State University of Campinas. Christopher Bratton is a professor in the School of Art, Design, and Architecture at Aalto University (Finland) and a cofounder of the Center for Arts, Design and Social Research (CAD+SR). Dalida Maria Benfield is an artist, filmmaker, writer, and researcher. She is the research and program director of the CAD+SR. Gabriel Pereira is a PhD Fellow at Aarhus University (Denmark), where he uses creative methods to blend science and technology research with artistic practice.

Guilherme Falcão is an art director working with and researching print and digital media. He has a BA in Graphic Design from Senac University Center (Brazil) and studied art history and curating at the Pontifical Catholic University of São Paulo. Brought together through the Center for Arts, Design and Social Research, these artists are collaborating on the Global rt Stories project, a rewriting of normative of art history, its ideologies and erasures.
