

STATEMENT ON SHARING POWER

As part of my continued efforts to share power and divert social and financial capital back to where it belongs, I am directing half of the royalties from this book to Indigenous Women Rising. I have been on the board of this incredible organization since 2018.

Through IWR's abortion fund, they help Native people access abortion care, which was scarce before Dobbs and even scarcer now. Through their midwifery program, the Indigenous Women Rising is committed to honoring Native and Indigenous people's inherent right to equitable and culturally safe health options through accessible health education, resources, and advocacy. Logo by Eloy Bida. Courtesy of Indigenous Women Rising.

Emergence Fund, they provide culturally appropriate birth care to Native people. And through their education and community power-building work, they share their vision of reproductive justice with Indigenous communities and beyond. I invite you to seek them out, engage with them on social media and in real life, and consider how you might contribute to their work.
