

Erratum: Addressing Therapeutic Inertia: Development and Implementation of an Electronic Health Record–Based Diabetes Intensification Tool. Diabetes Spectrum 2023;36:161–170 (<https://doi.org/10.2337/ds22-0031>)

Kevin M. Pantalone,¹ Swapnil Rajpathak,² Xinge Ji,³ Jian Jin,³ Tracey Weiss,² Janine Bauman,³ Tomas Radivoyevitch,³ Michael W. Kattan,³ Robert S. Zimmerman,¹ and Anita D. Misra-Hebert^{3,4,5}

¹Department of Endocrinology, Cleveland Clinic, Cleveland, OH; ²Merck & Co., Kenilworth, NJ; ³Department of Quantitative Health Sciences, Cleveland Clinic, Cleveland, OH; ⁴Department of Internal Medicine, Cleveland Clinic, Cleveland, OH; ⁵Healthcare Delivery and Implementation Science Center, Cleveland Clinic, Cleveland, OH

<https://doi.org/10.2337/ds23-er04>

During the final stage of production, several errors and inaccuracies were introduced in this article without the authors' approval or knowledge. These errors were introduced while testing a new proofing system:

- On page 161, an erroneous author name and corresponding author affiliation were added to the correct lists of authors and affiliations. The correct names and affiliations are shown above.
- On page 162, reference 13 was cited twice when it should have been cited only once.
- On page 169, erroneous final sentences were added to the Conclusion and Author Contributions sections.
- On page 170, an erroneous final reference was added to the References section.

The online version of the article (<https://doi.org/10.2337/ds22-0031>) has been updated to reflect these changes.

The American Diabetes Association regrets these errors and apologizes to the authors of the article and the readers of Diabetes Spectrum.