

Acknowledgments

First of all, I want to thank the 1,187 meditators who generously provided phenomenological reports describing an experience of pure awareness—including all those whose contributions, for reasons of space, didn't make it into the final version of this book. I also want to explicitly thank the many advanced practitioners who helped during the pilot studies, and all the translators who helped with different versions of our questionnaire. I regard all of you as my coauthors, and you have changed my life.

Another person who changed my life is Emily Troscianko, my wonderful “Editor from Hell.” She helped to put this book together over a period of three years. I have learned a lot from her and am deeply grateful for countless critical comments, new translations of many of the original texts presented in this book, and most of all for her highly professional and efficient editing. If any of this makes for an enjoyable read, it is her achievement (whenever it gets boring and slightly Germanic, then it is me, the author, translucently shining through).

I have also greatly profited from the eagle eyes of scholar-practitioner Cyril Costines, who has supported this book and the Minimal Phenomenal Experience Project in more ways than I could ever have expected. Then there are all those other members of the project who have supported me with extensive comments: first and foremost Alex Gamma and Toby Woods, but also Asena Boyadzhieva, Lars Sandved-Smith, and Ronald Sladky, and those who have not only given me helpful comments but also helped me with translating and understanding the work of Flemish mystic Begine of Hadewijch (Heleen Slagter), ancient Tibetan Buddhist texts (David Higgins), or early Indian sources (Monima Chadha), or allowed me to meditate in their scanner (Ronald Sladky). Many others invested a lot of their personal time and energy helping with the difficult task of translating the original survey into Spanish (Adriana Alcaraz-Sánchez), Italian (Tiziano Furlanetto), French (Solène Neyret), or German (Wanja Wiese and Jakub Limanowski) and then the reports back into English. I am greatly indebted to all of them. I would also like to thank the copyeditor Susan McClung and the production team at the MIT Press and Westchester Publishing Services. But my most valuable support and source of strength was, as always, my wife, Anja Krug-Metzinger.
