AJH Reviewers 2013

In this issue of AJH, we formally recognize and pay tribute to the many investigators and clinicians who have assessed and critiqued submissions over the past year. Remarkably, these distinguished men and women have given of their time and talent, in the midst of demanding professional lives, with no thought of reward other than their willingness to contribute to the academic process. They should, however, be aware that their contribution to the integrity and quality of medical communication is critical. We, your editorial collaborators, salute you.
