Cover: Landsat enhanced thematic mapper plus, bands 7, 4, and 2, of the Coso volcanic field, southeastern California. North is up. Most of the rocks in the center of the image are Pliocene to recent volcanic rocks cut by both dextral and normal faults associated with oblique divergence between the Sierra Nevada (western side of image) and the Basin and Range province (Paleozoic sedimentary rocks of the Argus Range on the far eastern side of the image). Wild Horse Mesa, with numerous fault scarps in basalt near the center of the image, is discussed by Lewis et al. (Chapter 6).
