have a list of list of family, friends, and community organizations, only 37% said their household has a specific plan for a disaster or emergency. Seven percent said they would not evacuate if public authorities announced a mandatory evacuation with the top three reasons for not evacuating being: 1) concern about leaving pets, 2) lack of transportation, and 3) could not be moved due to health problems. In summary, support services that an older adult relies on to live at home, such as help from family caregivers and in-home health care, may be unavailable due to a disaster thus increasing a person’s vulnerability and possibly leading to nursing home care that may have been otherwise avoidable.
