

Contributors to this Issue

WANNE MENDONCK is working on a Ph.D. dissertation about the literature of late-Victorian British “ethical socialism” at the Faculty of English and St John’s College, University of Cambridge.

MATTHEW REDMOND is a Lecturer in the Program in Writing and Rhetoric at Stanford University. He is the author of “Book-Time in Charles Lamb and Washington Irving,” which appeared in Romanticism and Time: Literary Temporalities, edited by Sophie Laniel-Musitelli and Céline Sabiron (2021). His essay “Trouble in Paradise: The Picturesque Fictions of Irving and His Successors” was published in ESQ in 2016, and “If Bird or Devil: Meta-Plagiarism in ‘The Raven’” appeared in The Edgar Allan Poe Review in 2018. He currently has two essays forthcoming: “Without the Power to Die: Dickinson’s Longevity” in English Literary History; and “Rip Van Winkle’s Coat: Inheriting the American Republic” in Textes et Contextes.

GRACE REXROTH is a Teaching Assistant Professor in the School of Education at the University of Colorado Boulder. She is the author of “Wordsworth’s Poetic Memoria Technica: What ‘Tintern Abbey’ Remembers,” which appeared in Studies in Romanticism in 2021. Her current book project, tentatively titled “Imprinted Memories,” examines Romantic print culture, the resurgence of medieval memory arts, and discussions of memory in the writings of Wordsworth, Coleridge, Austen, Byron, and Dickens, among others.