

EDITOR'S INTRODUCTION: FAREWELL

Carrie Leonetti*

This issue represents the end of an era. It is the final issue of the New Criminal Law Review.

Since I took over as the Editor in Chief five years ago, we have published in a topical symposium format. Because this is our last issue, we have decided simply to publish the five best submissions that we received in 2021. The subjects range from police officers' understandings of constitutional criminal procedure and theories of double jeopardy to victims' rights in military courts, how to think about the "rate" of wrongful convictions and clemency.

I am extremely grateful to all those who have contributed to the Review over the years: our authors, our reviewers, the members of our editorial board, and the members of our editorial staff. It has been my privilege to serve as its final Editor in Chief.

---

*Editor in Chief, New Criminal Law Review. Associate Professor & Assistant Dean Postgraduate, University of Auckland School of Law.