Contents

Articles

Boundary clauses and the use of the vernacular in eastern Frankish charters, c.750–c.900. Edward Roberts 580

Loans from English provincial towns to the crown during the reigns of Edward II and Edward III. Robin McCallum 605

William Weston: early voyager to the New World. Margaret M. Condon and Evan T. Jones 628

The doctrine of the Sabbath in the Edwardian Reformation. Stephen Tong 647

Promoting the Anglo-Scottish alliance of 1643: the Solemn League and Covenant and the parliamentary press in the first civil war. Joyce Macadam 662

The British financial revolution and the empire of credit in St. Kitts and Nevis, 1706–21. Aaron Graham 685

‘All the arts of a radical agitation’: transnational perspectives on British and Irish landowners and estates, 1800–1921. Annie Tindley 705

‘The pioneers of the great army of democrats’: the mythology and popular history of the British Labour party, 1890–1931. Antony Taylor 723

Restaging Mafeking in Muswell Hill: performing patriotism and charitability in London’s Boer War carnivals. Dion Georgiou 744

‘Beyond the facts’: how a U.S. sociologist made John Stuart Mill into a ‘Neo-Malthusian’. David Stack 772

Discovering film on Irish television: fragments from RTÉ archives 1960–5. Sian Barber 791